

NATURAL GAS SERVICE INTERRUPTION TREASURE ISLAND

DATE & TIMES:

AFFECTED PROPERTIES:

The SFPUC will be installing new equipment and/or performing maintenance in your area to ensure reliable service to all customers. In order to perform this work safely, the crew needs to temporarily interrupt your natural gas service, and will do its best to minimize the length of the service interruption.

If you are a Landlord with tenant(s) in the areas listed above and the SFPUC bill is in your name, it is your responsibility to notify the tenant(s) of the planned service interruption. It is also the Landlord's responsibility to re-light the tenants' pilot lights following the service interruption.

Unsafe weather conditions or any unforeseen emergency will require the Natural Gas Crew to cancel the work at the last minute and they will be unable to notify you of this cancellation. However, you will receive notification of the rescheduled date and time. The SFPUC apologizes for this inconvenience and thanks you for your patience.

OUTAGE NG NATURAL GAS TREASURE ISLAND

MGA PETA SA AT ORAS:

MGA APEKTADONG PROPERTY:

Ang Komisyon sa Mga Pampublikong Utility ng San Francisco (San Francisco Public Utilities Commission, SFPUC) ay maglalagay ng bagong equipment at/o magsasagawa ng pagmementina sa iyong lugar para matiyak na maaasahan ang serbisyo sa lahat ng customer. Para ligtas itong magawa, kailangan ng crew na pansamantalang ihinto ang iyong serbisyo sa natural gas, at gagawin nito ang lahat para hindi matagalan ang abala sa serbisyo.

Kung isa kang Landlord na may (mga) tenant sa mga lugar na nakalista sa itaas at nakapangalan sa iyo ang bill ng SFPUC, responsibilidad mong abisuhan ang (mga) nasabing tenant tungkol sa nakaplanong abala sa serbisyo. Responsibilidad din ng Landlord na i-relight ang mga pilot light ng mga tenant pagkatapos ng abala sa serbisyo.

Kapag hindi ligtas ang lagay ng panahon o kung may anumang hindi inaasahang emergency, kakailanganin ng Natural Gas Crew na kanselahin ang kanilang gagawin nang last minute at hindi ka nila maaabisuhan tungkol sa pagkanselang ito. Gayunpaman, makakatanggap ka ng abiso tungkol sa bagong petsa at oras. Humihingi ang SFPUC para sa abalang ito at nagpapasalamat ito sa iyong pag-unawa.

Treasure Island's promised wave of tenants is beginning to trickle in

SF Chronicle, October 6, 2024

Eric Dasmalchi was an urban design student at UC Berkeley in 2016 when a guest lecturer showed up to talk about the future development of Treasure Island.

He was intrigued as he learned about the vision of a dense community of 8,000 homes in high-rises and town houses, served by high-speed ferries and surrounded by 290 acres of parks and the bay.

"It seemed they were trying to build something that was more ambitious, sustainable and just really different from anything we have seen in California," he said.

What Dasmalchi could never have imagined at the time was that eight years later he would become the first tenant to move into the first high-rise completed on the island, the 22-story Isle House apartment tower on the western edge of the rapidly developing 425-acre community that will eventually have six high-rises and several mid-rises.

In September, Dasmalchi — who is 28 and works for the state as a transportation planner — relocated from Los Angeles to Isle House. He sold his car and has been getting around by ferry and bike. One day a week, he bikes to the Amtrak station in Emeryville in order to commute to Sacramento.

From his apartment he watches the ferries, cruise boats and cargo ships crisscross the bay. On some mornings, the fog shrouds the Golden Gate Bridge. On other days it's sharp against the water and sky. While a few other residents have now moved in, the first night it was just him and a building manager.

"It was strange but not too creepy. There was construction staff going in and out so I didn't feel too alone," he said. "It was just really quiet."

Living there teaches you to "notice the weather, the wind and fog, throughout the day," he said.

"In the morning I check to see how much of the downtown skyline I can see, whether the Golden Gate Bridge is visible," he said. "In the evening the wind whips up the water and there is a sense of drama."

Isle House, which former Chronicle urban design critic John King called "evocative of the stylish vintage airplane hangars along nearby Clipper Cove," opened in September after two years of construction.

It has all the fancy stuff you would expect in a deluxe urban building, including a lobby lounge with "modern Shou Sugi Ban-style walls, white oak millwork banquette seating" and private co-working suites. The glass-clad recessed seventh floor has 7,000 square feet of decks and gardens; fitness and yoga studio overlooking the bay; a fireside hangout area, library, den, bar area, grills and al fresco dining spaces.

Studios start around $3,000 with one-bedroom units from $3,400 and two-bedroom units from about $5,000. There are townhomes that rent for more than $6,500 and three-bedroom penthouses that go for more than $8,000. About 20 leases have been signed so far, although the building has been open less than a month.

Developer Chris Meany said the design by San Francisco architect David Baker is meant to take maximum advantage of the bay: There are serrated bay windows at every level of the building, which includes a black brick base, a variety of gray tiles, plaster and glass. The hallways have full glass windows on both ends.

"The idea is that Isle House is an absolute expression of San Francisco but it's super dialed into being part of the bay," Meany said. "That killer view of Golden Gate Bridge — anybody who gets off of the elevator, that is yours."

With the opening of Isle House, Treasure Island now has about 1,000 housing units either open or under construction. There is the affordable 105-unit Maceo May building, and the 124-unit Bristol on the connected Yerba Buena Island. Under construction near Isle House is the 148-condo project 490 Avenue of the Palms, and another 178 apartments in a building called Hawkins.

In total, the first phase of Treasure Island includes 1,900 units as well as multiple parks, including a soon-to-be-finished Crissy Field-like promenade that will stretch in from of Isle House, along the island's western shore.

For the restaurateurs who made early bets on the promise of Treasure Island, it has been a tough road. But there is suddenly reason for optimism.

A decade ago Linda Edson opened Aracely, the island's first full-service restaurant.

"It was a huge gamble," she said. "When we were under construction we literally had days when not single car or person would walk by."

Now Edson gets groups of dog walkers from the Bristol stopping in for brunch, and she is catering a Blue Angels watch party at Isle House this coming week.

"It's been amazing to watch this little city grow," she said. "Every time a building goes up, the landscaping goes in. I'm excited to be an established business because the only thing that can happen is it can get better."

Eight years ago, MeeSun Boice and executive chef Parke Ulrich opened Mersea, which means "Island Oasis" in old English.

"A lot of people thought I was crazy. We were trying to get investors. They were like 'no way we are going to Treasure Island. They have been talking about development there for 30 years. It's never going to happen.'"

Boice recently catered the event at which Bay FC, the professional women's soccer franchise, announced it would build its practice facility on Treasure Island. She said she would like to move into Isle House but she first has to sell or lease her San Francisco loft.

"My dream is to wake up and see that view," she said. "They brought the elegance of the San Francisco fancy high-rise experience to the island."

Residents at the Isle House are given a ferry pass that is good for a year. Robert Moore, a 29-year-old sales consultant who works in Salesforce Tower, was the second resident to move into Isle House. He said he had been living in the South Bay when his employer "called us back to the office."

While most of his friends were moving to Dogpatch, he decided Treasure Island was more his speed and also a quicker commute. It was also a better deal than the building he was looking at.

“I’ve got the full Bay Bridge on the left. I’ve got the full city in front of me. And it’s foggy today but on a good day you see Alcatraz, Sausalito, Angel Island,” he said. “It’s absolutely beautiful.”

Baker, the project architect, said he hears the same questions about the viability of Treasure Island that he once heard about other undeveloped parts of the city.

“People are questioning T.I. but they question Mission Bay a lot,” he said. “Now you go to Mission Bay and it’s starting to be a place.”

First High-Rise Opens on San Francisco’s Treasure Island

Connect Care, October 9, 2024

San Francisco-based developer Wilson Meany and real estate investment firm Stockbridge Capital Group announced the completion and grand opening of Isle House, a waterfront residential tower and the first high-rise on San Francisco’s Treasure Island. Isle House, located at 39 Bruton St., has opened to its first residents.

Designed by David Baker Architects and rising 22 stories, the waterfront community features 250 apartments for lease, nine two-level live-work townhomes with private entries, 1,140 square feet of street-level retail and a central courtyard.

“It’s exciting to see Treasure Island achieve this important milestone that brings new housing options to San Francisco,” said Chris Meany, managing partner at Wilson Meany. “We believe Isle House will quickly become a vibrant part of the community and serve as a blueprint for what living on Treasure Island represents.”

Treasure Island Community Development, a partnership between Wilson Meany, Stockbridge and Lennar Corporation, has been transforming the island into a sustainable and connected waterfront community. When completed, this transformation will feature 8,000 new homes, 300 acres of new parks, trails and open space, and a mix of restaurants, shops and cultural attractions.

Mayor London Breed Celebrates the Grand Opening of Second 100% Affordable Housing Project on Treasure Island

SF.Gov, October 9, 2024

San Francisco, CA - Today, Mayor London N. Breed and representatives from the California Department of Housing and Community Development (HCD) joined City officials, community leaders, and housing advocates to celebrate the grand opening of Star View Court, a new 100% family-oriented affordable housing project on Treasure Island.

Located at 78 Johnson Street, Star View Court is a seven-story, 138-unit development offering homes designated for formerly homeless families, legacy Treasure Island households, and households earning between 50-80% of the area median income. It's also the second affordable housing project to finish construction as part of a larger plan to revitalize and further develop Treasure Island.

"We are transforming Treasure Island into a premier, 21st century neighborhood right in the middle of the San Francisco Bay," said Mayor London Breed. "Star View Court will deliver affordable housing as part of our broader revitalization project that will serve all San Franciscans. This is an exciting milestone in our long-term vision that will include more than 300 acres of parks, open trails, restaurants, public art, and the future home Bay FC's training complex. But it takes more than the City to do this work – I want to thank the community for their support, as well as our state partners who are providing critical financial support for this project and others throughout San Francisco."

Star View Court is part of the greater Treasure Island Revitalization Plan, a Development Agreement between the Treasure Island Development Authority (TIDA) and Treasure Island Community Development (TICD). This plan includes 8,000 new residential units for more than 18,000 residents, including a minimum of 435 new units that will be prioritizing homeless households to be developed by One Treasure Island member organizations, such as Mercy Housing and Catholic Charities. The entire Treasure Island project, once completed, will add more than 2,000 below-market-rate homes to San Francisco's affordable housing portfolio.

"Treasure Island is becoming a model for San Francisco's future, where growth and community go hand in hand," said District 6 Supervisor Matt Dorsey. "The opening of Star View Court marks a significant milestone as one of the first 100% affordable housing developments on the Island. This project is not only helping to address our city's housing needs but will also provide a stable and supportive community for current and future residents for years to come."

"Star View Court represents a significant milestone in our ongoing efforts to provide stable, supportive housing for those in need. Overall, our vision is that Treasure Island will become a lively, diverse, mixed-income neighborhood with Star View Court at its heart," said Nella Goncalves, Co-Executive Director of One Treasure Island.

Increasing housing affordable to lower-income and vulnerable residents is a key priority in the City's Housing Element which calls for additional funding for affordable housing production and preservation, as well as Mayor Breed's Housing for All Executive Directive that sets out the steps the City will take to meet the bold goal of allowing for 82,000 new homes to be built over the next eight years.

Star View Court was developed by Mercy Housing California in collaboration with Catholic Charities. The new building features a secure courtyard and bicycle parking, parking garage, laundry facilities, and community-serving spaces, including a teen lounge and a community kitchen. With residents now moved in, Mercy Housing will continue to provide property management services while counselors from Catholic Charities provide on-site support to residents in their new homes and connect households to social services.

“I have been working at Catholic Charities for nearly 30 years. This is one of my proudest days. There are solutions to homelessness when you dream big and get things done,” said Ellen Hammerle, Ph.D, Chief Executive Officer of Catholic Charities of San Francisco. “Catholic Charities plays a key role in keeping families housed in the Bay Area. Our partnership with Mercy Housing, the Treasure Island Development Authority, and One Treasure Island means that 138 households now have a future full of dignity, permanency, and belonging.”

“This beautiful, newly constructed building is a crucial step toward ensuring that all individuals, regardless of age or background, have access to safe, affordable housing in San Francisco,” said Doug Shoemaker, President at Mercy Housing California. “Treasure Island is a more vibrant place now that residents have moved into Star View Court.”

Star View Court was funded in part by the Mayor’s Office of Housing and Community Development (MOHCD) through the voter-approved 2019 Affordable Housing General Obligation Bond, with additional financing support from the California Department of Housing and Community Development (HCD) via the Affordable Housing and Sustainable Communities (AHSC) program and the California Housing Accelerator fund, a state program that aimed to reduce the backlog of affordable housing projects that were stalled in the funding pipeline.

“The Accelerator program does just what the name implies,” said HCD Director Gustavo Velasquez. “This program lets us kick-start shovel-ready projects that otherwise may have been derailed by funding gaps. Now Star View Court stands as the core of what will grow into a revitalized Treasure Island community and a true home for so many who have fought to remain in San Francisco despite rising costs.”

The name “Star View Court” highlights the building's view of the San Francisco Bay and pays tribute to the former Star Barracks that housed enlisted military personnel when Treasure Island was an active military base. Star View Court was designed by Paulett Taggart Architects, woman-owned San Francisco firm, and constructed by local general contractor Nibbi Brothers. Local firms Community Economica Inc., Gubb & Barshay, and Rockridge Geotechnical were also enlisted on the project.

Both Treasure Island and Yerba Buena Island are being transformed into an environmentally sustainable new 21st-century San Francisco neighborhoods, in the middle of San Francisco Bay. In addition to Star View Court, the larger revitalization project also includes 300 acres of parks, trails and open spaces, with new restaurants and shops, and public art installations. Bay FC, the new women’s professional soccer franchise representing the Bay Area in the National Women’s Soccer League (NWSL), in September announced the franchise’s plans for the location of Bay FC’s new permanent training facility on Treasure Island.

Second New Affordable Housing Project Opens on Treasure Island, San Francisco

SF Yimby, October 11, 2024

Star View Court has opened its doors to residents as the second affordable housing community to finish in recent years on San Francisco's Treasure Island. The seven-story building has added 138 units to 78 Johnson Street, including 94 replacement units for families living on the artificial island. Catholic Charities and Mercy Housing are jointly responsible for the development.

San Francisco-based Paulett Taggart Architects is responsible for the design. The team writes that the building “responds to its site with two building wings that address the scale of each frontage: reaching seven stories along busy Seven Seas Avenue and stepping down to four stories with ground-level stoops along the pedestrian and bike-only Shared Public Way. The building wings are linked by a generously glazed community room that faces towards a future park, opens onto a shared courtyard, and forms the heart of this vibrant new community.”

The complex now yields around 210,600 square feet, including 140,800 square feet for housing alongside a 28-car garage. Unit types vary with one-bedrooms, two-bedrooms, three-bedrooms, and four-bedrooms. Residential management will be provided by Mercy, with supportive services and case management provided on-site by both developers. On-site amenities will include a community room, bicycle parking, on-site laundry, and immediate access to the adjacent 6th Street Park.

The Treasure Island master plan was designed by SOM and is being developed by TICD, a partnership with Stockbridge Capital Group, Wilson Meany, and Lennar Corporation. Across Treasure Island and Yerba Buena, TICD has planned to build 8,000 new apartments, of which nearly half will be built during phase one. Including adaptive reuse, construction will produce 202,000 square feet of offices, 67,000 square feet for retail, and 42,000 square feet for circulation. The master plan also aims to include 140,000 square feet of new retail, 100,000 square feet for offices, and a 500-key hotel.

The first affordable project to open as part of the Treasure Island Masterplan is Maceo May Apartments. The six-story development was co-sponsored by the Chinatown Community Development Center and Swords to Plowshares. Now complete, the project has 105 units and supportive housing services aimed at helping veterans.

Star View Court is named after the former Star Barracks, which housed military members on Treasure Island. The site is located along Seven Seas Avenue, next to Maceo May, and close to the now tree-less waterfront thoroughfare, Avenue of the Palms.

Floating marine lab relocated to Treasure Island gives students unique learning opportunity

ABC 7, October 17, 2024

SAN FRANCISCO (KGO) -- An innovative floating lab is now helping young students become Climate Ready by understanding the marine life in the San Francisco Bay.

And as ABC7 News learned, the journey starts when they hit the water.

Dozens of young students enjoyed a day of sailing and learning about the marine creatures that inhabit San Francisco Bay.

The program is run by the Treasure Island Sailing Center. It takes kids, often from inner-city neighborhoods, onto the water in small sailboats with longtime instructors like Chris Childers and Justine O'Connor.

"I've sailed my whole life, run a bunch of programs, but Chris is my neighbor and I'm helping him out today," O'Connor said.

While the voyage circles the cove at Treasure Island, there's a new addition to the trip: a white dome that looks something like a floating sea turtle. It's the creation of Margaret Ikeda and Evan Jones, along with their team at the California College of the Arts.

ABC7 News first profiled the lab several years ago. That's when it was anchored near the Port of Oakland, helping college students and faculty researchers test climate-resilient, bio-friendly architectural designs. Recently, Jones and Ikeda moved the platform to Treasure Island where it will be now accessible to younger students.

"We haven't ever had this chance to be able to be around kids this age and engage them with the float labs, with questions about things that grow on it, about questions as they're older, about buoyancy. It's just been pretty amazing," she said.

"Do you guys want to check out the really cool project that they have in the water down there?" O'Connor asks her crew of students. "They're measuring how sea grows on the bottom of that. Can change the biodiversity and actually help mitigate some of the climate change impacts."

After circling the float lab, the group is ready to head dockside for a closer look at some other sea creatures the floating lab is designed to study. Instructors have several platforms placed in the Bay to attract sea creatures. And for the students, it's a chance to discover on their own, while lying on their tummies on the dock or pouring through illustrations in a classroom setting.

At the end of the day, it's a melding of education, adventure and a dose of citizen science. It's training a new generation to be Climate Ready by better understanding the environment around them.

Some of the designs developed with the help of the float lab have found their way into locations here in the Bay Area, including Crissy Field at San Francisco's Presidio.

Cycling path across entire Bay Bridge pushed to 2033

SF Chronicle, October 27, 2024

A long-awaited bike path for cyclists that would connect the East Bay to San Francisco has been delayed again, with funding for a portion of the project still in limbo.

The project, dubbed the Bay Skyway, is split into two phases.

The first phase consists of two parts. The first is called the West Oakland Link, which will extend the east span path on the Bay Bridge to West Oakland to connect with planned bike lanes on Grand Avenue to Downtown Oakland, according to Bay Area transportation officials.

The second part of the first phase calls for the construction of a multiuse path on Yerba Buena Island to connect the Bay Bridge east span path to electric ferry service between downtown San Francisco and Treasure Island, officials said.

Both phase one projects are expected to open in 2028, officials said. Previously, officials had 2027 as a projected opening.

Phase two of the project calls for building a bicycle and pedestrian path on the west span of the Bay Bridge, to connect downtown San Francisco to Treasure Island and allow residents to walk or bike to and from downtown Oakland. A state and federal environmental analysis is expected to be completed in 2026, officials said.

The plan is for the path to be constructed on the north side of the Bay Bridge's western span. The path would end on San Francisco's Essex Street, officials said. The east span and west span paths would connect to a new path parallel to Hillcrest Road on Yerba Buena Island, officials said.

However, the second phase of the project faces major hurdles.

Securing funding for the west span path continues to be an issue, officials said. The west span path is estimated to cost "hundreds of millions of dollars," officials said, adding that they do not know yet where the money will come from. If phase two of the project receives the necessary funding, the west span path could open as early as 2033 — instead of the earlier projected year of 2030.

The pathways could be a welcome sight for cyclists, who currently have to bike across the Golden Gate Bridge and Richmond-San Rafael Bridge if cycling from San Francisco to the East Bay.

“The Bay Skyway will help shift transbay trips to walking, biking and other micromobility (e-scooter, e-skateboard, etc.) options, which will reduce congestion and greenhouse gas emissions, while providing low-cost transportation options for Bay Area residents,” said a statement from transportation officials.

In 2022, planners said a “best-case scenario” for the full route completion would be opening by 2030.

Project planners said there are design challenges for the west span that have yet to be solved, such as making sure the addition is earthquake safe, can hold up against strong winds, provides access to maintenance crews, maintains boat clearance and can connect to the existing bicycle and pedestrian network.
