

RENAMING THE OCEANSIDE WATER POLLUTION CONTROL PLANT TO THE GEORGE W BUSH SEWAGE PLANT

The Public Utilities Commission of the City and County of San Francisco ("the City") owns and operates the Oceanside Water Pollution Control Plant. The facility is located off the Great Highway near the San Francisco Zoo. The facility provides wastewater and storm water treatment for water from the west side of San Francisco, and discharges cleaned water into the Pacific Ocean.

This measure would change the name of the facility from the Oceanside Water Pollution Control Plant to the George W Bush Sewage Plant. The change would become effective upon the inauguration of the next President of the United States following the measure's passage. At that time, the measure would require the City immediately to change its website and the outdoor signage at the facility to reflect the new name. The measure also would require the City to use the new name in all stationery, business cards, city maps and other public materials that the City orders or prints after the name change.
