CCDC History

Mental services were severely under-utilized by the Chinese Community in Chinatown in the 1970's. At that time, there was only one Chinese child being served in the SF mental health system. Chinatown Child Development Center (CCDC) was founded in 1973 under a grant from the National Institute of Mental Health (NIMH) to provide culturally sensitive and innovative outpatient mental health to the Chinese American community. The grant was an eight-year decreasing grant. The City and County of San Francisco recognized the need and proportionately increased its contribution to CCDC's budget as NIMH decreased its funding. In 1976, CCDC became a civil service program within the City and County of San Francisco Department of Public Health (SF DPH).

CCDC Mission & Philosophy

CCDC's Mission is to promote the social-emotional well-being of children, youth, and their families in San Francisco by providing comprehensive mental health services which are easily accessible and linguistically and culturally appropriate.

CCDC is committed to the principle that mental health services shall be located within the community and easily accessible to the residents. These services shall also be provided by qualified staff who respect the traditions, cultures and beliefs of each client and are competent in the representative languages and backgrounds of the residents.

As the Chinese speaking population is the predominant ethnic-linguistic group in the Chinatown area, the clinic staffing includes bilingual and bicultural professional staff dedicated to supporting the rich cultural heritage of Chinese Americans and other ethnic groups. Staff language capacities have included Cantonese, Mandarin, other Chinese dialects, as well as Vietnamese, Spanish, and English.
