3. San Francisco Reinvestment Working Group Update on Public Banking (Discussion Item)

Christin Evans and Khalid Samarrae, from the San Francisco Reinvestment Working Group, presented draft plans for a San Francisco Public Bank and a Municipal Financial Corporation (MFC). They noted that a city owned bank will serve communities often overlooked or discriminated against by traditional banks. In 2019 Asm. David Chiu passed state law to allow municipalities to create public banks. The working group formed in 2021 under LAFCO and is tasked with developing a plan for an MFC and Public Bank. A public bank would get funding from City of San Francisco to start operations and issue loans as an MFC. They need $20 million to capitalize an MFC. It would be self sustaining in 3 years. Their hope is by September to have submitted plans to LAFCO and Board of Supervisors.

Commissioner Comments:

Herbert: What kind of investments would the bank make? Bonds? $ will come from City of SF. Bank would generate income by making loans and generating interest. Participatory lending would be the model – give money to DFI's like Main Street Launch to make loans to small businesses. Public Bank of North Dakota does this. This would cover gaps in current banking: affordable housing loans and small business startup costs.

Ortiz-Cartagena: Would this be like a CDFI? Yes, this would be mandated by state law to work with partners already providing similar services.

How would a public bank address cultural competency? Bank will have equity standards and a mission to follow.

Zouzuonis: The Commission can be strong allies in this work via our access to data to identify gaps. Her biggest concern is what percent is going to be funded via participatory lending? 50% to CDFIs. This is concerning because they have limited reach and while they have equity plans, they still have issues such as not hiring diverse workforce. And CDFI's export out small business technical assistance.

Tang: What's the status with a statewide public bank? The state is studying its feasibility.

Ortiz-Cartagena: 25 commissioners would oversee this? Yes, this number is based on other public banking oversight models. When would this be in operation? It's a 3 year timeline to become a bank.

Huie: how will you navigate city bureaucracy? This will be a separate entity, independent corp. From the city. It would cost $600k in start up costs and $20 mill to capitalize.

Carter: This is very exciting. How can community groups follow this? Main website.

Zouzounis: How will we generate $20 million? The governance model would need to be approved by voters. Green financing/general fund/reserves could cover the costs.

No members of the public requested to speak.

4. Small Business Survey Results: Discussion of Recommendations (Discussion Item)

The Commission reviewed draft policy recommendations based on the recent Small Business Survey results:

Draft rec: draw down federal funds for ERTC

Huie: A targeted approach to outreach would be good – specifically reaching out to merchant groups.

Dickerson: It was complicated and time is running out.

Ortiz-Cartagena: fraud associated with PPP loans in his community made people skeptical about another federal program. It's hard to tell CPAs that they can do it.

Tang: Pelosi's office is interested in helping with outreach.

Carter: Could we work with the Chamber on this? They have recommendations.

Draft Rec: Work closely with Workforce Development Division

Ortiz-Cartagena: yes, use more resources to build that existing relationship up

Huie: sector based hiring fairs or neighborhood based hiring fairs would be good

Tang: There is a list of job centers in each neighborhood

Herbert: hiring fairs by industry would be great

Carter: let's create pipelines with schools

Ortiz-Cartagena: Jobs Now is great – we need to think about youth getting into vocational trades.

Zouzounis: a lot of job fairs seemed geared toward larger employers. Can neighborhood funds from merchant groups go to having resource fairs? Could those funds subsidize wages?

Huie: We need to think how we can make SF a good place to be a worker.

Dickerson: Connecting employees to available housing would be helpful

Carter: Housing preferences for employees should exist.

Draft rec: Clean and safe streets:

Ortiz-Cartagena: this ties in with the ability to have workers – we can't get people to come to work because of safety concerns.

Carter: Yes to community ambassadors. Urban Alchemy monitors the tenderloin and they are helpful.

Zouzounis: are there any codes preventing the city from sidewalk/street cleaning? No. Sidewalk is technically a property owners responsibility but City does help with public cleaning (public trash cans, street sweeping, etc). Supervisors can give addback funding for enhanced cleaning services.

Herbert: Wealthier neighborhoods are spotless- why? Higher homeownership?

Huie: It would be good to develop resources to help small businesses know who to call.

Carter: we need better security and street cleaning

Herbert: street activations with events are useful

Carter: Let's include continuing First Year Free

Draft Rec: Reform Healthcare Security Ordinance

Ortiz-Cartagena: give small businesses back HCSO fees

Herbert: there are health related things we can invest in that would assist small businesses – needle exchanges, etc.

No members of the public requested to speak.

Carter: there was a Black Woman Makers fair at the ferry building on Saturday. It was great. Would like to request a street vending update from DPW.

Zouzounis: Saw the Reparations Commission recommendations and they are very much in line with SBC goals. Let's support them.
