BUSINESS DESCRIPTION

Rocco's Cafe is an Italian-American style community restaurant known for classic dishes such as linguine with clams, chicken marsala, and grilled polenta. With a focus on preserving history, fostering community, and sharing the joy of Italian dining with all, Rocco's continues to be a gem in San Francisco's culinary landscape. They have cultivated a loyal following of regular customers, as well as attracted new visitors.

The restaurant was established as "Rocco's Fine Food" in 1932 by Rocco Coscarelli. Rocco, an Italian immigrant, fulfilled his dream of opening his own restaurant after several years of working for other Italian restaurants. Demetrios "Jimmy" Simotas began working under Rocco at a young age, eventually taking over the restaurant after his passing in 1962. Ready for retirement, Jimmy passed ownership of the restaurant to Rocco's grandson, Donald "Don" Dial, in 1990. The landlord of the original location in the Excelsior, located at 4581 Mission Street, did not want to extend a lease to a 25-year-old. This led Don to relocate the restaurant to the present location at 1131 Folsom Street in the SoMa neighborhood.

In 2023, business partners Michael Rotella, Scott Beck, and Mitch Penning purchased the brand and business from Don, allowing him to retire on December 31, 2023. The new business partners took over on January 1st, 2024, and have committed to continuing the family restaurant's legacy of serving Italian classics and large portions. The restaurant also regularly gives back to the community, whether partnering with housing associations in the SoMa community or supporting police officers and City workers.

CRITERION 1

Has the applicant operated in San Francisco for 30 or more years, with no break in San Francisco operations exceeding two years?

Yes, Rocco's Cafe has operated in San Francisco for 30 or more years, with no break in San Francisco operations exceeding two years:

Yes, Rocco's Cafe has contributed to the history and identity of the Excelsior and South of Market neighborhoods and San Francisco.

The Historic Preservation Commission recommended the applicant as qualifying, noting the following ways the applicant contributed to the neighborhood's history and/or the identity of a particular neighborhood or community:

- The business is associated with Italian food.
- Rocco's has attracted many significant customers over the years, and most notably is located within the footprint of Folsom Street Fair. Folsom Street, which attracts 400,000 annual visitors is California's third largest street event.
- The property was identified in the South of Market Area Historic Resource Survey, but was not formally evaluated.
- Rocco's Cafe has been featured in SFGATE, Restaurant Realty Company, San Francisco Magazine, The San Francisco Chronicle, and Hoodline. The restaurant has also been featured on KQED and on Guy Fieri's Diners, Drive-Ins and Dives.
- With regard to racial and social equity, Rocco's Cafe was founded by Italian immigrant Rocco Coscarelli in 1932. For nearly 100 years, the restaurant has persisted, continuing to share Italian culture with the community. Now located in SoMa, the restaurant has continued its commitment to the neighborhood as it rapidly changed. Further, Rocco's Cafe has maintained a presence for over 30 years in one of San Francisco's most prolific queer communities, the Leather & LGBTQ community, where it has ensured to provide a welcome environment to all. The restaurant has a presence each year during the Folsom Street Fair which celebrates the neighborhood's unique and rich LGBTQ kink history.

Is the applicant committed to maintaining the physical features or traditions that define the business, including craft, culinary, or art forms?

Yes, Rocco's Café is committed to maintaining the physical features and traditions that define the business.

Dear Director Tang,

Roccas Cafe is an esteemed establishment that has been an integral part of the San Francisco community since 1990. They have been a staple to the SOMA food scene, providing homestyle Italian cooking with friendly staff who makes everyone feel like a regular.

The business has consistently showcased its dedication to the community by remaining open and serving everyone without prejudice based on factors such as race, sexual orientation, or religion. Additionally, they actively engage with all housing associations in the SOMA housing community and extend support to local police officers and city workers daily during their breakfast and lunch breaks.

Rocco arrived in America in the 1920s with a dream of opening his own restaurant. After running his establishment for over 30 years, he attributes its success to a combination of quality, quantity, and personality. The traditional Italian recipe for success has been passed down to his grandson, Don, who, at the age of 25, opened Rocco's Café in honor of his grandfather.

Preserving the legacy of Roccas Cafe is not just a matter of maintaining a business; it's about safeguarding a piece of San Francisco's history and culture. The community would undoubtedly be diminished if this cherished establishment were to be sold.

Thank you for considering this nomination. I believe that recognizing Rocco's cafe on the Legacy Business Registry would be a fitting tribute to its enduring contribution to the fabric of San Francisco.

Sincerely,

MATT DORSEY

ROCCO'S CAFE

Written Historical Narrative

INTRODUCTION

a. Describe the business. What does it sell or provide?

Rocco's Cafe is a classic Italian-American-style community restaurant. They focus on homestyle, fresh cooking, serving the Excelsior neighborhood from 1932 to 1993 and the South of Market neighborhood since 1990. Throughout the decades, Rocco's has been a gathering place for the community, welcoming local residents, city workers, and visitors alike. As SoMa evolves, Rocco's remains committed to being a consistent haven, adapting to the changing needs of its guests while staying true to its roots. With a focus on preserving history, fostering community engagement, and sharing the joy of Italian dining for generations to come, Rocco's continues to be a cherished gem in San Francisco's culinary landscape.

b. Describe whom the business serves.

Rocco's Cafe is a staple to the South of Market food scene, providing homestyle Italian cooking with friendly staff members who make everyone feel like a regular.

c. In about 2-5 words (15-30 characters), describe what the business is known for.

Classic Italian dishes.

CRITERION 1: The business has operated in San Francisco for 30 or more years, with no break in San Francisco operations exceeding two years

a. Provide a short history of the business, including locations and owners.

Rocco's Cafe was established as "Rocco's Fine Food" in 1932 by Rocco Coscarelli. The business was located at 4581 Mission Street in the Excelsior neighborhood.

In 1920, Rocco immigrated from Italy to the United States to pursue his dreams. He worked for years in the North Beach institutions Fior d'Italia, Bimbo's 365 Club, and The Riviera. In 1932, Rocco and his wife, Constantina, opened their own Italian restaurant, Rocco's Fine Food. His sandwiches were served at the 1937 Golden Gate Bridge opening party.¹

For three decades, Rocco Coscarelli successfully operated the thriving business built on quality, quantity, and personality. In the early years of the business, Rocco hired a young kid named Demetrios “Jimmy” Simotas who worked for him for years. Jimmy was European like Rocco – tall with blue eyes. Rocco came up with the nickname “Jimmy the Greek” because he was from Greece, and the name stuck.

Over time, Jimmy the Greek worked his way up to head chef and business partner. After Rocco passed away in 1962, Jimmy, who had been Rocco’s business partner for many years by that time, took over solo ownership.

In 1990, Jimmy wanted to retire and pass the business on to Rocco’s grandson, Donald Dial. Don grew up immersed in Italian cooking, helping his family prepare traditional dishes from a young age. He later worked alongside his Uncle Lou at the Italian-American Social Club in San Francisco where three generations of his family had been employed. At 18, Don combined his experience and strong work ethic to enter the restaurant business, quickly rising to General Manager at an Italian restaurant in North Beach. When Jimmy announced his retirement, Don decided it was his time to maintain his grandfather's legacy and own his own restaurant.

Don wanted to take over the business and lease at 4581 Mission Street, but the landlord of the building did not want to extend the lease to a 25-year-old. So, Don found a new location at 1131 Folsom Street in the South of Market neighborhood in November 1990 with the goal of moving Rocco’s to the new location.

When Don closed on the SoMa location, the building was completely rundown, and it took him several months to fix and bring everything up to code. The official opening was in 1991 under the name “Cafe Rocco.” The modified name featuring “cafe” reflected the addition of breakfast to Rocco Coscarelli’s iconic Italian dinner recipes.

Once Don opened the SoMa location, Jimmy the Greek was forced to finish out the Excelsior lease, which expired in 1993. Once Jimmy fully closed the original location in 1993, Don changed the restaurant’s name to Rocco’s Cafe and unified the brand.

In the year 2000, when the building that houses Rocco’s Cafe went up for sale, Don was able to purchase it.

In 2023, business partners Michael Rotella, Scott Beck, and Mitch Penning purchased the business and brand, with Don retaining ownership of the building. Don fully retired on December 31, 2023, and the new business partners took over on January 1, 2024. In operating this iconic SoMa restaurant, they are focused on maintaining the family's legacy and ensuring that the business continues to thrive.

Rocco’s Cafe continues its tradition of serving authentic Italian cuisine, reminiscent of old North Beach. Rocco’s serves classic dishes like Linguine with Clams, Chicken Marsala, and Grilled Polenta, focusing on individual attention and generous portions. All sauces, dressings, marinades, and most desserts are made from scratch to ensure the highest quality and authentic flavors.

b. Provide the ownership history of the business in a consolidated year-to-year format.

c. Describe any circumstances that required the business to cease operations in San Francisco for any significant length of time.

During the COVID pandemic in 2020 and 2021, Rocco's Cafe maintained business operations the best that it could through the various health mandates. Rocco's served food to go for some time, then installed plexiglass and added tables outside.

CRITERION 2: The business has contributed to the neighborhood's history and/or the identity of a particular neighborhood or community

a. Describe the business' contribution to the history and/or identity of the neighborhood, community, business sector, or San Francisco as a whole.

Rocco's Cafe enjoys a loyal following of regular customers, some of whom remember going to Rocco's Fine Food in the Excelsior, who keep coming back to this neighborhood favorite for good homemade Italian food with a lively atmosphere, quick service, and large portions.

The daily specials at Rocco's Cafe pay homage to the legacy of Rocco Coscarelli and Donald Dial, featuring their beloved recipes that have become customer favorites over the years. Indulge in Rocco's timeless classics from the 1930s, 1940s, and 1950s, such as the delectable and hearty Cioppino, or the extra lemony caper sole. Don's signature dishes, including the savory Chicken Marsala and Chicken Piccata, continue to captivate palates and honor his culinary expertise.

In recognition of the many nighttime establishments in Western SoMa, Rocco's Cafe is open for late night dining on Friday and Saturday nights, from 10 p.m. to 2:00 a.m., thus contributing to the active nightlife in the neighborhood.

The business highlights the rich history of San Francisco with photos all throughout the restaurant, and the business features their neighborhood regulars through photos of experiences they have had at Rocco's.

b. Is the business associated with significant people or events, either now or in the past?

Rocco's has survived multiple decades in the ever-evolving SoMa community. The business is located within the footprint of the annual Folsom Street Fair, which attracts 400,000 visitors and is the third-largest street event in California.

c. How does the business demonstrate its commitment to the community?

Rocco's Cafe participates with all housing associations in the SoMa community and supports their local police officers and city workers every day for their breakfast and lunch breaks.

d. Has the business ever been referenced in the media, business trade publication, and/or historical documents?

Rocco's Cafe has been referenced in the media throughout its history. Following are some key media mentions.

e. Has the business ever received any awards, recognition, or political commendations?

Not applicable.

f. How would the community be diminished if the business were to be sold, relocated, shut down, etc.?

If the business were to close, the SoMa neighborhood, with its limited food options, would be left with no breakfast and lunch restaurant. In addition, city workers would lose a go-to lunch spot that has been popular since 1990.

CRITERION 3: The business is committed to maintaining the physical features or traditions that define the business

a. Is the business associated with a culturally significant building, structure, object, signage, mural, architectural detail, neon sign, or any other special physical feature that defines the business?

The neon “Rocco’s Cafe” sign on the exterior of the building dates back to 1945. In addition, there is a “Welcome to San Francisco” sign inside the restaurant that dates back to 1962.

b. In a few words, describe the main business activity you commit to maintaining.

Restaurant that serves the community and makes everyone feel at home. The business focuses on providing the LGBTQ community with a safe, welcoming space to enjoy good food and company.

c. What is the plan to keep the business open in the long term beyond the current ownership?

Rocco’s Cafe plans to maintain the current employees who have worked in the restaurant since 2002. They also recently expanded their hours to late night and early morning to ensure the community continues to have a reliable place to dine.

d. What challenges is the business facing today?

The business is struggling with surging prices of utilities (water and power), food costs, and labor costs. The owners try to maintain affordable prices and good quality food, but it continues to be a challenge.

Legacy Business Program staff will add the following details:

a. Features or traditions that define the business and should be maintained for the business to remain on the Legacy Business Registry.

Restaurant featuring Italian cuisine.

b. Other special features of the business location, such as if the property associated with the business is listed on a local, state, or federal historic resources registry.

The Planning Department Historic Resource Status of the building at 1131 Folsom Street is “B - Unknown / Age Eligible.”

26 YEARS IN, ROCCO'S CAFE STILL THRIVES IN A CHANGING SOMA

By Brittany Hopkins

Published on June 10, 2016

Between three recently shuttered SoMa restaurants—Triptych, El Capitan and Carafe—and across the street from 111 future apartments sits Rocco's Cafe. Chef Don Dial and many longtime team members have been feeding the neighborhood from the ground floor of 1131 Folsom St. for 26 years, making Rocco's the oldest operating restaurant in the neighborhood, Dial says.

In that time, Dial has seen it all: the AIDS epidemic, which ravaged the health of some of his most loyal customers; the technology booms and busts, which drove people in and out of SoMa's residential buildings; and now, the latest development land grab.

But Dial has been a fighter from the start—and Rocco's ability to withstand the ebbs and flows of its ever-changing neighborhood is no coincidence.

Getting Started

When Dial set out to open his own restaurant, he was 23 and penniless. Over the course of 18 months, he looked at over 100 restaurants from here to Santa Rosa, but he really wanted to be in San Francisco. "I was looking for something that wasn't established, because I had hardly any money at all," he explains.

Brokers were little help. "They said, 'Hey kid, how much money you want to spend?'" When he told them, they responded "'There's no way you're ever gonna make it.' They dropped me," Dial said. "So I started looking around on my own for restaurants that were 'not for sale.' They are for sale, because they have no business. All you have to do is ask."

In addition to an affordable price, Dial wanted a restaurant with an open kitchen. "I'm a big character person. And I knew that if you own a restaurant, you need somebody who works both the front of the house and the back of the house ... I wanted to do both. And the only way to do both is to have people sit in the kitchen and come to me."

His biggest goal was to find a space in a small building—one that he could one day afford to buy. "I'm a third-generation restaurateur, so I know that if you do not own your own business, they will kick you out. You will lose your lease."

Dial's search finally led to 1131 Folsom St., a two-story building between Seventh and Eighth streets. "The [original owner] was so happy," he said. "[When I came in], it was Friday at about 1pm and there was not one person in here—the place had broken windows. The owner was so excited that when I ordered another beer, he bought it for me."

Dial eventually asked the owner how much he wanted for the place, and was given a price of $125,000. "So I walked around the restaurant. I saw broken tables, the patio outside is all broken, the windows are broken, downstairs is all infested with rodents ... It was really, really bad. I offered $25,000 instead, and he kicked me out."

But Dial was persistent. After a trip to the Health Department to read up on all the restaurant's past violations and fines, he managed to negotiate down the price—to $43,000.

Securing A Future

While the restaurant sat in escrow for seven months, Dial spent 10 hours a day, five days a week renovating the space himself, he says. With a fully stocked kitchen, $1,300 he made from catering a film shoot and all odds against him, he opened his doors for breakfast, lunch and dinner in June 1991.

From day one, business was off to a solid start, thanks to an advertising technique with a unique inspiration. "I used to live in North Beach, and there used to be barkers out there at the strip clubs. The guys who walk by say, 'Hey, come on in! I got the most beautiful ladies in town! Oh my god, you'll love it.'"

"So I took that same theory. I stood out here in my chef's coat every afternoon at 12pm, when people are walking by in their suits and ties going to restaurants. And I'd say, 'Hey guys, listen, come here ... I'm not selling a car, I'm not selling a couch. You'll owe me 20 bucks, that's it. You come in here and if you're not gonna like it, you're out 20 bucks ... And I don't even care if you don't come back.'"

"Who says that?" Dial laughs. "But I had to get 'em hooked."

The technique worked. Soon enough, "everybody was eating here," he says. "Police officers, city officials, industrial workers, residents ... it blew up like crazy. There was a line every single day."

Each night after the restaurant closed, Dial put a few dollars away. Nine years later, when Rocco's entire building went up for sale, he had enough stashed away to make a down payment and purchase it.

A Changing Neighborhood

Maintaining a healthy business in sprawling, ever-evolving western SoMa hasn't always been easy. Rocco's opened during the HIV/AIDS epidemic, and Dial watched many loyal customers who lived nearby struggle and succumb to the disease. The tech boom in the late '90s brought in new money and new companies, but drove the neighborhood's manufacturers out. And when all the tech investment dried up, "things got very scary," Dial said. "Empty spaces. No manufacturers. No tenants. No people. No money."

"What saved me, to this day, is that we're not a fad," Dial said. "We're kind of like your grandma's place. It's comfortable to be here; we're something you can count on. We're not gonna sit here and tell you that we're the best. We're not. That's not what we are. But we do a lot of different food here. It's breakfast, it's lunch, it's dinner. It's Italian food. It's American food. My wife says, 'It's whatever Don wants to make.'"

While offering an extensive menu with "something for everybody" helps drive word-of-mouth and attract repeat customers, it's not just a marketing ploy, Dial said. "Everything I make, I want to make it like the best you've ever had. I don't want to make it just to be there ... It's really important to me to make high-quality food in very big portions at a very decent price with really crazy service."

Looking Forward

The photographs, news clippings and kitschy trinkets adorning his walls are mostly crap, Dial said. But if you put enough together, it's art. And believe it or not, there's plenty of room for more.

"This is an industry that always changes," Dial said. "You really, really have to work hard and you have to love it." While he's comfortable with Rocco's being "like your grandma's place," he knows staying on the cutting edge is important.

Dial still refuses to advertise his business via traditional means, but he now has someone managing his social media presence, to help draw in a younger crowd. He's also ventured into catering for office lunches, company parties, weddings and other events.

But overall, Rocco's nature will always be old-school, with "something for everybody" on the menu and an energized Dial inside, working around the clock to make sure everyone is happy—at least for the next eight to ten years, he said.

Business Description

Rocco's Cafe is an Italian-American style community restaurant. They are known for classic dishes such as linguine with clams, chicken marsala, and grilled polenta. With a focus on preserving history, fostering community, and sharing the joy of Italian dining with all, Rocco's continues to be a gem in San Francisco's culinary landscape. They have cultivated a loyal following of regular customers, as well as attracted new visitors.

The restaurant was established as "Rocco's Fine Food" in 1932 by Rocco Coscarelli. Rocco, an Italian immigrant, fulfilled his dream of opening his own restaurant after several years of working for other Italian estaurants. Demetrios "Jimmy" Simotas began working under Rocco at a young age, eventually taking over the restaurant after his passing in 1962. Ready for retirement, Jimmy passed ownership of the restaurant to Rocco's grandson, Donald "Don" Dial, in 1990. The landlord of the original location in the Excelsior, located at 4581 Mission Street, did not want to extend a lease to a 25-year-old. This led Don to relocate the restaurant to the present location at 1131 Folsom Street in the SoMa neighborhood.

In 2023 business partners Michael Rotella, Scott Beck, and Mitch Penning purchased the brand and business from Don, allowing him to retire on December 31, 2023. The new business partners took over on January 1st, 2024, and have committed to continuing the family restaurant's legacy of serving Italian classics and large portions. The restaurant also regularly gives back to the community, whether partnering with housing associations in the SoMa community or supporting police officers and City workers.

Racial and Social Equity Analysis

On July 15th, 2020 the San Francisco Historic Preservation Commission adopted Resolution No. 1127 centering Preservation Planning on racial and social equity. Understanding the benefits, burdens, and opportunities to advance racial and social equity that proposed Preservation Planning documents provide is part of the Department's Racial and Social Equity Initiative. This is also consistent with the Mayor's Citywide Strategic Initiatives for equity and accountability and with the Office of Racial Equity, which required all Departments to conduct this analysis.

The Legacy Business Program is deeply intertwined with these goals. One of the primary purposes of the Legacy Business Program is to maintain San Francisco's cultural fabric and to foster civic engagement and pride by assisting long-operating businesses remain in the city. The Legacy Business Registry was established to recognize longstanding, community-serving businesses that are valuable cultural assets of the city. These businesses, ranging from restaurants to art galleries to tire shops to community shelters, are key to sustaining the racial and social diversity in San Francisco and adding to the identity and character of our city and the many communities within it.

Rocco's Café was founded by Italian immigrant Rocco Coscarelli in 1932. For nearly 100 years, the restaurant has persisted, continuing to share Italian culture with the community. Now located in SoMa, the restaurant has continued its commitment to the neighborhood as it rapidly changed. Further, Rocco's Café has maintained a presence for over 30 years in one of San Francisco's most prolific queer communities, the Leather & LGBTQ community, where it has ensured to provide a welcome environment to all. The restaurant has a presence each year during the Folsom Street Fair which celebrates the neighborhood's unique and rich LGBTQ kink history.
