	There are many logical reasons to oppose this school bond. Unfortunately most people vote on these measures emotionally, heeding the cry of "it's for the children". If you're reading this however, you are not most people. Sadly, few voters do any real research prior to voting! It's admittedly tough to make an informed decision on a long laundry list of projects about which few details are given. Proposition A promises to fund everything from building repairs, to interior redesign, to a central food hub. Why not split it into multiple smaller measures and let us vote individual projects up or down? This is common practice in districts like the one in Texas an author of this argument lived in before coming to San Francisco and making the dubious decision to enroll his two kids in government schools here. Or better yet, learn to responsibly live within a budget rather than borrowing $790 million at an estimated repayment cost (per the Controller's analysis) of nearly $1.3 billion – coincidentally(?) the same size as the SFUSD's 2024 budget, which irresponsibly exceeds district revenues by $148 million. With under 50,000 children now enrolled, they're spending over $26,000 per student per year! Meanwhile, you're being asked to swallow this gigantic, jagged $1.3 billion pill whole, increasing your debt servitude via property taxes. Paying taxes every year on something you already own hurts, especially when you don't even own the property but see your rent increase because the landlord has to pay more. Why not cut the salaries of the superintendent ($310,000/year) and other overpaid administrators instead? How do other districts manage to spend far less per student? Unless you ask these tough questions, expect to keep getting more of the same. Vote NO on Prop. A!
