BACKGROUND

A peer is a person who draws on lived experience with mental illness and/or substance use disorder and recovery, bolstered by specialized training, to deliver valuable support services in a mental health and/or substance use setting.

The COVID-19 pandemic and economic downturn pose a serious threat to the mental health of Californians. Calls to suicide prevention lines from California were up 40 percent in March. Calls to the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration's disaster distress hotline increased 891 percent from March 2019 to March 2020. 891 percent. The need for mental health response will continue to grow even as the state of emergency subsides. The sharp rise in mental health disorders triggered by COVID-19 is likely to linger long after the end of the pandemic itself. For some people, it will create enduring mental health issues.

THE ROLE OF PEER SUPPORT

Studies demonstrate that use of peer support specialists in a comprehensive mental health or substance disorder treatment program helps reduce client hospitalizations, improve client functioning, increase client satisfaction, alleviate depression and other symptoms, and diversify the mental health workforce. That's why 48 other states have adopted peer certification programs. They have established clear, basic standards for peer training and they get a federal match for the services. California is behind and needs to catch up.

The pandemic is revealing racial and economic disparities that have long existed. The peer workforce tends to be more diverse than the existing behavioral health workforce. Peers play a unique role that no other provider type can. They are trusted community members who have been through crisis and can guide others. They can serve the most pressing needs, such as supporting individuals who are homeless or struggling with navigating care systems, because they have been there.

Peer support can divert people from emergency services and ensure patients receive a continuum of care, saving substantial costs of treatment and improving health outcomes. Research shows that peers contribute to the ability of people with mental illness and substance abuse to obtain education and employment, contributing to the California economy rather than depending on social safety nets alone.

Federal agencies such as CMS and SAMSHA, and prestigious organizations like the Institute of Medicine have identified services offered through a certified peer specialists as being valuable and effective. While increasing consumer wellness, the use of peer specialists decreases costs. Data shows a clear return on investment when peers are part of the mental health system.

STATEWIDE CERTIFICATION

Statewide certification would ensure quality, standardization, and effectiveness of peer support services and allow federal dollars to be drawn down for any California county that chooses to opt-in to the program.

In 2007, the federal Centers for Medicare and Medicaid issued guidance for the reimbursement of peer services. Under the guidance, peer services are eligible for federal reimbursement upon the adoption of statewide training and certification standards.

Currently California has no uniform education and training standard for behavioral health peer support services and no peer services-specific Medi-Cal billing codes.

THIS BILL

SB 803 establishes statewide training standards for peer support specialists and requires the DHCS to activate a billing code for peer services in Medi-Cal, enabling participating counties to receive matching federal funds. Counties can opt-in to the program to provide certified peer support specialist services in their county. Under the bill, a participating county is responsible for training and certifying a peer, and providing program oversight. The peers program defines the range of responsibilities and practice guidelines for peer support specialists, specifies required training and continuing education requirements, determines clinical supervision requirements, and establishes a code of ethics and processes for revocation of certification.

The bill would permit peers certified in one county to practice in counties that opt-in to the program. Finally, the bill only comes into effect if the Department of Health Care Services gains federal approval.
